Lincoln Day Sentiments

Below are a few sentences or sentiments from letters and speeches of Lincoln and comments upon his character, methods and conduct. They are good reading for any hour in the lifetime of men or nations; but particularly to be thought upon at this birthday of Lincoln and season of confusion in the political affairs of the world.—Ed T.

*** And now, with a brave army and a just cause, may God sustain you.—Lincoln to Grant, April 30, 1864.

*** General Grant is a copious worker and fighter, but a very meager writer or telegrapher.—Lincoln to Burnside, July 27, 1863.

*** Everyone likes a compliment.—Lincoln to Thurlow Weed, March 15, 1865.

*** My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union.—Lincoln to Horace Greeley, August 22, 1862.

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in.—Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865.

Gold is good in its place, but living, brave, patriotic men are better than gold.—Speech November 10, 1864.

*** That this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.—Gettysburg Address, Nov. 19, 1863.

I have never had a feeling, politically, that did not spring from the sentiments embodied in the Declaration of Independence.—Speech at Philadelphia, February 22, 1861.

It is not too much to say of him (Lincoln) that he is among the greatest masters of prose ever produced by the English race.—London Spectator.

*** Men are not flattered by being shown that there has been a difference of purpose between the Almighty and them.—Letter to Thurlow Weed, March 15, 1865.

"The failure of his (Lincoln's) political ambitions in the summer of 1849 had decided him henceforth to devote himself to the practice of law. For nearly six years he kept this resolution. Then *** he flung himself again into politics."

*** Men will do things under the terror of the party lash that they would not on any account or for any consideration do otherwise.—Lincoln's "Lost Speech", Springfield, May 29, 1856.

*** But we must not promise what we ought not, lest we be called on to perform what we cannot.—"Lost Speech".

*** Let us *** appeal to the sense and patriotism of the people.—"Lost Speech".

In grave emergencies moderation is generally safer than radicalism.—"Lost Speech".

We cannot have free government without elections.—Speech November 10, 1864.

*** There is no permanent class of hired laborers among us. Twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer. The hired laborer of yesterday labors on his own account today, and will hire others to labor for him tomorrow.—Fragment on Slavery, July 1, 1854.

"He (Lincoln) did not tell a story merely for the sake of the anecdote, but to point a moral or elench a fact. He seemed to recollect every incident in his experience and to weave it into material for his stories. One evening a sentinel whose post was near enough to enable him to catch most of the President's remarks, was heard to say: 'Well, that man's got a powerful memory and a mighty poor forgettery.' An officer once remarked that he would rather have a single photograph of one of Mr. Lincoln's jokes than own the negative of any other man's.—'Campaigning with Grant,' by General Horace Porter, our Minister to France.

"I have seen your dispatch expressing your unwillingness to break your hold where you are. Neither am I willing. Hold on with a bulldog grip, and chew and choke as much as possible."—A. Lincoln to Gen. Grant, August 17, 1864.

LINCOLN RELICS

WILL BE DISPLAYED

AT ST. LOUIS FAIR

St. Louis, Jan. 30.—The Oldroyd collection of relics of Abraham Lincoln, which is to be bought by the United States Government, and which is eventually to form the nucleus of a great Lincoln memorial and museum to be established in Washington, may be exhibited at the World's Fair.

When Governor Sayers of Texas was a member of Congress he pushed a bill through that body appropriating $25,000 for the purchase of the house in which Lincoln died. He was preparing to introduce a second bill purchasing the Oldroyd collection of Lincoln souvenirs for $25,000 when he was elected Governor of Texas.

Mr. Oldroyd has refused several offers of $250,000 from individuals for the collection, feeling that the Government should own these invaluable relics. Three influential members of Congress have recently revived the matter of buying the relics, and it is expected that the proposition will be so advanced by the time the World's Fair opens that they may be displayed to all visitors.

Among the thousands of interesting articles in the collection are books and miscellaneous articles once the property of Mr. Lincoln; autograph letters, documents and pictures illustrating his early life and homes; scenes in his life illustrating his journey from Springfield to be inaugurated President in 1861; pictures illustrating the assassination and funeral of the President. The collection also contains photographs and authentic relics of Lincoln, the President's assassin. There is a black-toucan rail split by Lincoln in 1859; the chair used by him in his law office at Springfield, and in which he sat when he formed his first cabinet and drafted his first inaugural address before he left for Washington.

The collection is now stored in the old house at 516 Tenth Street, in Washington, opposite the building that was Ford's theatre. In a small room at the end of the hall in this old house Abraham Lincoln breathed his last on the night of April 14, 1865. Photographic views of the house, and of the room in which the President died, will be comprised in the collection.

JAPANESE EDITOR

OF RUMOR

SAYS IMPOSSIBLE

There was a report on the street this morning that Port Arthur had been captured by the Japanese at 10 o'clock last night. Inquiry at the Consulate failed to elicit any confirmation of the rumor.

Japanese newspaper men of the city, on hearing the rumor of the capture of Port Arthur, simply smiled and shrugged an incredulous shrug. One of the most prominent editors said:

"Why that is a plain fake on the face of it. Landing of troops at Port Arthur in less than three or four days is an absolute impossibility. We can throw all the shells we want into Port Arthur and blow up the fleet, and still we couldn't get in. The place is most heavily fortified, and unquestionably the whole narrow entrance is a network of torpedoes. It would mean certain suicide to attempt to proceed right into port under the circumstances."

"That the Japanese will make an attempt to capture Port Arthur goes without saying. Troops will be sent up the Yalu river and it will take our men in the neighborhood of three or four days to get in around behind Port Arthur. Then we would be ready for an attack, our land forces attending to the forts and the city and our navy seeing that the Russian ships are hemmed in."

"Besides the fact that it would be absolutely impossible for our ships to enter Port Arthur, it is very well known that we have not enough troops mobilized yet to attack the Russian stronghold by land and our army is not doing any foolish little tricks at this particular stage of the game."

"I see in your extra of this morning that the Japanese Consulate has received a cablegram announcing a call on the naval reserves."

take these vessels to get to the scene of activity. She means to go right at the proposition in Asiatic waters, as soon as possible and wipe the Russian fleet off the face of the waters. She will try to capture every transport, supply or other vessel flying the Russian flag. After accomplishing this end, Japan will prepare for the death struggle with the flower of the Russian navy—the Baltic fleet. This will be the naval fight of the war and it will unquestionably be one of the most bloody in the annals of history.

"I have talked with Japanese navy men in Honolulu and they all hold the same opinion as myself. Japan is making hay while the sun shines and I believe it is this very speed in operations that will win the day for her."

A few copies of Mr. Edgar's paper on "Treatment of Feed Water for Boiler Purposes," which paper was given before the association October 23, 1904, have been received from the printer.

Any member desiring a copy will be furnished with one on application to the Secretary.

The committee on topics desire that the subjects discussed at our regular meetings shall be both interesting and instructive and for the greatest good of the largest number. To this end the association needs the help of every member. The following are some of the ways in which you can aid:

(a) By suggesting subjects for discussion in which you are interested or which in your opinion should be discussed.

(b) By preparing a paper or a talk on at least one of such subjects.

(c) By attending the meetings and taking some part in them. If you do not feel equal to talking in the meeting, write out your remarks or any questions you wish to ask, and hand to the Secretary to read.
